SUMMER 1996

BRUNSWICK COUNTY, 1854

[A letter written by John Mercer of Brunswick County, N.C. to Alfred Galloway who moved from Brunswick to Madison County, Mississippi.]

Lockwoods Folly
30 September 1854

Mr. Galloway,

Dear Friend:

As it has been a long time since you wrote me and since I have heard from you, I have concluded to avail myself of the present opportunity of writing you a few lines calculating you would occasionally like to hear from your old and long enjoyed native land and also from your relatives and friends. Myself, wife and six children are at present all in the enjoyment of reasonable health. My old mother and father are yet in the land of the living but as a matter of course, very weak and feeble, not able to get about half their time. Your relatives on here are at present, so far as I know, all well and doing well. Some already in good circumstances and others getting rich. There has not many of the citizens of Brunswick died since my last letter to you. June last Mr. Charles V. Fullwood died after a long and painful illness of some five months, leaving five minor children.

Times have greatly changed since you were in North Carolina. Though the State is old and to some extent abandoned, her resources are but begun to be developed. Since the spirit of emigration has abated new energies, new enterprises and renewed zeal seem to have taken place. We have a new court house about completed, costing above $10,000, and a new Academy 40 ft square costing $25 to $30, all in Smithville. Considerable improvements are going on in Smithville in the way of building and in other ways. Wilmington has improved rapidly for the last ten years, and since the railroad from Wilmington to Charleston has been put in operation additional prosperity to the town and adjacent country may reasonably be expected.

On account of extreme dry weather the past Spring and part of the summer, crops on here are extremely short and so far as I can find out, it is with some exceptions a general thing throughout the Union.

We have recently been visited by a severe gale on this coast resulting in the destruction of a great many vessels and valuable lives. The gale started and was at its worst about the 8th and 9th of September. The Schooner, John Potts Brown, was wrecked and came ashore on the beach at a little west of the mouth of Lockwoods Folly. The crew and passengers were 14 in number and but one was saved. I name this because it was here among us.

I must not omit telling you that we have had considerable excitement in this State last month in regard to the election of Governor, members of the Legislature, etc.. There never was so much rejoicing in old Brunswick at any result before as at the defeat of the Whigs by the Democrats. The Whigs brought out Russell and we, the Democrats, ran Col. Gaston Meares, son of William B. Meares, deceased. Though we have been in the minority for the last ten years, we beat 25 votes, we also beat 19 votes for Governor in Old Brunswick. So you see that Brunswick is again right side up and we hope so to remain for all time. Thomas Bragg, the Democrat. beat Gen. Dockery, the Whig, about 2400 votes in the State. We have some 22 majority in the Legislature on the ballot.

I could write for three hours more, but as it would be neither profitable nor interesting will close with a request that you soon write and please let me hear something from yourself and family and our Brunswick acquaintances, the Lockes, the Portevants, Thomas A. Smith and family, and others you may think of.

Respectfully your friend and humble servant,

J.W. Mercer

[The above letter was transcribed by Ida Brooks Kellam for the Stamp Defiance Chapter, D.A.R. in 1937. Unfortunately there is no mention of where Mrs. Kellam got the letter. Her copy can be found in the Mercer family file, New Hanover County Public Library. Editor's note: Thousands of North Carolinians left for parts south during the antebellum period. They were looking for new cheap farm land, and the untouched stock of trees for tar, pitch and turpentine. Former southeastern North Carolinians can found everywhere, but especially in Alabama, Georgia, Florida, Mississippi and Texas. Just look at the out of state license plates in the library parking lot. You can bet they are from these states, and you can bet you will find their owners in the Local History and Genealogy Room!].

WHERE DID YOUR NORTH CAROLINA ANCESTOR GO?

[The following was submitted by Bill Reaves, from the Wilmington Messenger, September 24, 1889.]

"Immigrant agent Wilson has been collating some statistics with reference to the number of North Carolinians in other States. He says that of runaway "Tar Heels" there are in Alabama, 23,269; South Carolina, 17,297; Georgia, 24,156; Florida, 6,297; Mississippi, 23,128; Louisiana, 6,202; Texas, 23,277; Tennessee, 41,918; Kentucky, 9,738; Arkansas, 19,727; Indiana, 20,884; Virginia, 22,505; Kansas, 5,809; Missouri, 15,925."

Raleigh, N. C. August 30, 1881:

The Fight at Fort Fisher
By A Survivor

Warsaw, N. C. August 10, 1881
Editor Daily Review:

Having read several communications in the papers of late concerning Fort Fisher, and being an eye witness to all that took place at Fort Fisher before and during the last attack made on the fort by the federal forces, I write this note to say that Col. William LAMB was the commander of the fort while that chain of sand batteries and the mound were being constructed by the 36th North Carolina troops and about 300 negro laborers. These works were called Fort Fisher in honor of the late Col. FISHER and Col. LAMB was in command of the fort during both attacks made on the fort by the federals, and remained in command until he was wounded while leading the third charge our handful of soldiers made on the enemy's legions that were charging and pouring into the fort on the land face near the river. It was in this charge that Col. LAMB fell seriously wounded and was carried off the field to a place of safety, if such a place had been possible, and then the command devolved upon Maj. REILLY, he being the ranking officer. I must not neglect to mention that Gen. W. H. C. WHITING had previously fallen wounded while leading the second charge of our troops made on the Federal forces. How it was that Gen. WHITING was not chief in command during the fight I have never been able to learn, but that he was in the fight and wounded as above stated are certainly facts, for I saw these things and know whereof I speak. And after we were all made prisoners of war, I shall never forget what Gen. WHITING said while passing us where the Yankees were guarding us. The wounded General came along, borne on a litter by some of his own soldiers, and though it was dark, he knew us, and said, "Goodbye, boys; they have got us but you have done your duty well."

Gen. BRAGG might have displayed bad generalship in refusing to order Gen. HOKE to attack the Federal forces while landing, or afterwards, but at the same time, he displayed a wonderful sense of humanity when he refused to sacrifice the lives of HOKE's division in an already hopeless cause, be-cause PORTER's fleet could have nearly destroyed a large army before they could have got in shooting distance of the federals while landing, or after they did land, and no doubt but Gen. Bragg was aware of this. In fact, we know he was, and the only thing for which Col. LAMB could be blamed was in not surrendering the fort on conditions Sunday morning, January 15th. He could not help seeing then that the fort would soon be captured as all the guns on the land face were already dismounted by shot and shell from the fleet, and we did not have enough men to cope with their infantry. We were about 2,500 strong and the enemy had 9,000 troops landed and besides, the Federals believed the fort nearly impregnable and would, no doubt, have given good terms had it been proposed to them. This would have saved the lives of many who died in prison. But Col. LAMB's idea was to die but not surrender, which was a bad one while contending against superior numbers and resources.

The fleet appeared off the fort on Thursday night, the 12th of January, 1865 about 10 or 11 o'clock, and proceeded to land at once, and by daybreak were prepared to move on the fort. Of course, the land forces entrenched themselves as fast as possible and about 8 o'clock on Friday morning the fleet steamed up as near as they seemed to want to, the famous Ironsides taking the nearest position to the fort, where she dropped anchor and assumed a daring attitude and invited the fort to the combat. Everything about the fort was quiet and still. All nature seemed to be resting. You could hardly see a ripple on the ocean. Every man in the fort was at his post ready to do his duty. But this unusual silence only lasted 15 or 20 minutes, when the shrill and sharp but firm voice of Col. LAMB was heard to ring out upon the air: "Cumberland Battery, fire!", and the Blakely guns belched forth their heavy 128 lb. steel pointed shots, striking the wheelhouse of the Ironsides plumb, but doing her no damage whatever. This gave the signal for action and the Ironsides and the whole fleet immediately opened fire on the fort, bringing six hundred guns to bear and throwing 500 shot and shell inside the fort to the minute. All Fort Fisher opened fire on the fleet. A cloud of smoke and flame soon formed over the fort and one could no longer hear anything but one continuous roar that seemed louder than thunder. The shower of exploded shell and the Greek fire with which a great many were loaded was terrible in the extreme. The fort kept up as steady a fire as possible. Our men behaved nobly and braved the hot waves of fire and smoke and deadly showers of castiron. Sometimes whole detachments would be killed and wounded in trying to get to the guns where a detachment had already succumbed to the deadly hail. This continued until about midnight when the fleet ceased firing until Saturday morning at sunrise, when they opened on the fort again, more terrific then ever, if possible, and kept up the fire all day Saturday and Saturday night and all day Sunday until about 3 o'clock P.M., when the enemy discovered they had dismounted all the guns on the land face of the fort. About 500 mariners then landed and attempted to enter the fort at or near the Cumberland Battery, but Col. LAMB was still there, and some of these guns not being dismounted, he used grape and canister shot, and drove them back with great slaughter. Seeing this movement was a failure, the enemy ordered his infantry to charge the fort by way of the gate or road leading into the fort near the river. This was done and then came the tug of war. The enemy came charging into the fort. We had a light battery stationed near the gate to defend it, and they did it nobly until overpowered by numbers, and their guns taken away from the few survivors of the company, who were made prisoners. About this time the guns on the mound were turned to bear on the gate, and the heaps of dead men there showed what effect the well-timed shell from the mound had in checking the enemy's entrance into the fort. The guns of the whole fleet were now turned on the mound, and cannonading was rapid and severe; but in the meantime Gen. WHITING, Col. LAMB, and other officers had rallied all the force possible and made three unsuccessful charges upon the enemy, who was now strong in numbers and within the fort, in which both Gen. WHITING and Col. LAMB were wounded, as I have stated, and a great number of men killed and wounded on both sides. What troops we had then fell back and took shelter along the sea face of the fort, which led to the mound on the right of the fort. The fleet then ceased firing so that their infantry could go down to the land face, along which they had to do some fighting. Our men stubbornly retreated toward the mound. Darkness was now hovering over the field of carnage and blood. From the mound our forces retreated to the Marine Battery on the extreme point. When we reached this battery the marines had spiked the guns and crossed the river in their boats, and we could retreat no further. We then decided to make no further resistance. The enemy marched his heavy columns down near to us and sent an officer with a flag, who asked for the commanding officer. He was told that Major REILLY was the man, and whether the Major surrendered in form and ceremony I don't know. We were marched out of the fort that night about three miles up the coast, where we remained until we were put on transports and shipped to northern prisons, and left the key to the Confederate States in possession of the federal authorities. But before we were marched on board the transports which would carry us North--and more than two-thirds of us to our last resting places, for more than two-thirds of our men died in prison--and while we were yet on the beach three miles above the fort, we witnessed the blowing up of the supply magazine in the fort, which contained about 10,000 pounds of gunpowder and other ordnance stores, and the enemy being encamped near by, it was said five hundred of their men were killed by the explosion as also some of our wounded. This magazine was a solid house made of timber fourteen inches square and then sand put on to the depth of thirty feet and turfed over. These timbers were blown up about one mile high, and came down tumbling end over end as though they were as light as cornstalks. This explosion occurred on Wednesday morning, January 18, 1865, a little after sunrise. It was said that some of our men told the Yankee soldiers that there was a barrel of whisky buried in the magazine, and it being dark inside, some fellow went in with a torch to look for it. The writer passed there on the next day, and the dead and different parts of dead men were a ghastly sight to behold. The federals made a great mistake in taking Fort Fisher, as they could have done without it, and the Confederates made a great blunder in trying to hold it, as the time would and did come when it would have been of no use to them.

Respectfully.

B. L. BLACKMORE

[B.L. Blackmore, the writer of the above letter, was born near Warsaw, Duplin County, North Carolina, July 4, 1844; died Warsaw, North Carolina, September 23, 1921. He was a member of Company A, 36th Regular N.C. Volunteers, Confederate States of America. Submitted by Helen Moore Sammons. For all the fans of Civil War research, in the next issue of the Clarendon Courier we will begin a list of men who were killed, captured, or wounded at the battle of Fort Fisher.]

Editor's Note: This is the fourth in a series of biographical sketches in the Courier. If you would like to contribute to future issues, please send biographical information along with at least one document, ie., will, deed, pension, naturalization, letter, diary entry, etc. Illustrations are welcome.

According to an article in the Jan-Feb Genealogy Bulletin by William Dollarhide, genealogy is rapidly becoming the number one hobby in America for adults, particularly for those in their 30s or over. According to a nationwide survey 87.5 million of us are "actively involved" or "somewhat involved" in genealogical research. That means there are plenty of cousins out there looking for you!

BRUNSWICK COUNTY, NORTH CAROLINA, LAND GRANT BOOK "A"

[Brunswick County was formed in 1764 from New Hanover and Bladen counties. In 1808 part of Brunswick was taken to from Columbus County. the original land grants can be found at the North Carolina Department of Archives, Raleigh, N.C. A microfilm copy of Brunswick County Land Grants, 1788-1815, Vol. A can be found in the New Hanover Public Library. these abstracts are taken from an 1883 transcription done by H.K. Ruark, Brunswick County Register of Deeds. The first number given is the page number, the second number given is the land grant number. All of the grants are signed by the then serving NC governor. On page 41, following the land grants, is a copy of a plat of David Allison's grant of 41.600 acres. Allison was a land speculator and this particular grant stretched from Town Creek, to the present day entrance to Sunny Point Military Terminal, to the town of Supply in southern Brunswick County. Copies of these interesting land plats can often be found along with the written grant and it is worth the time looking for them. The plat was submitted by Frank Galloway and John Butler. Suzanne Lamble skillfully cleaned it up for publication. Continued from the SPRING 1996 Courier.]

MEMORIALS

It was a sad day for all genealogists who love the history of the Cape Fear region when ONHGS member Walton Graves died on March 13, 1996. Walt and his lovely wife Mae Blake Graves were charter members and avid supporters of our society. They have opened their house several times to the society for our annual picnic, and during the past Christmas season for a superb party celebrating their home, Sloop Point Plantation, recently designated the oldest house in the entire state of North Carolina. He lovingly restored Sloop Point, was an excellent researcher and fine historian who read the Colonial Records of North Carolina for fun. Although he was only 65 years old, we are pleased that death was swift and painless. We will miss his pleasant smile and longtime commitment to the enhancement of history in our region. We are also sorry to hear of the illness of his dear wife Mae. Our hearts and minds are with you, hoping for your speedy recovery.

We lost another great local historian and genealogist on March 29, 1996 when Wayne Arnold of Burgaw passed away. Wayne, who would have reached 90 on his next birthday, was a life long collector of local history, genealogy, and lore. He was a charter member of the Pender County Historical Society and an active member of the Moore's Creek Battleground Association. He was always willing to share his vast array of local information. Our heartfelt sympathy goes to his wife Mary Blake Arnold, who is currently recovering from a broken hip. We wish her a speedy recovery.

On April 20, 1996, Dorothy Woods, long time assistant in the library's local history room passed away. "Dot," as she was affectionately known by all the local researchers, assisted every user with her unique combination of diligence, insight and gentleness. Her primary job was organizing and maintaining the library's extensive files. All of you who write regularly for the Reaves Collection files, have Dot to thank for your timely and courteous reply. She was also responsible for strengthening the local African-American collections. She was a good researcher and a fine librarian. We miss her, especially her sweet smile when she said "may I help you, please."

NEW HANOVER COUNTY DEED BOOK C

[Many of the earliest records of New Hanover County were destroyed by courthouse fires. What was left of the first two deed books, A and B, were combined to form Book AB. They have been abstracted and published by ONHGS member Mae Blake Graves. New Hanover County was formed in 1729 from Craven County. Bladen and Onslow Counties were formed out of New Hanover in 1734, Duplin County in 1750, Brunswick County in 1764, part of New Hanover was annexed by Sampson County in 1795, and last but not least, Pender County was farmed from New Hanover in 1875. The following abstracts of Deed Book C, which covers many early records of the above mentioned counties, was compiled by Ida Brooks Kellam in 1939. Continued from the SPRING 1996 Courier.]
